

Transitions

You can use the following sentences to link the different parts or sections of your presentation. Remember that they also give a clear ‘signal’ to your listeners as to the point you have reached in the structure of your presentation.

Introducing Your First Point

- To start with, I'd like to consider
- First of all, I'd like to look at ...

Finishing A Point

- Those are the main points on ...
- Now that I've told you about ...
- Now that we've looked at/dealt with X, I'd like to move on to Y.

Starting A New Point

- Now let's move on to . . .
- I'd now like to examine/consider/discuss . . .
- The next point I'd like to make . . .

Referring To What You Have Just Said

- As I said at the beginning . . .
- As I've already said . . .
- As I mentioned earlier, . . .
- I told you a few moments ago that . . .

Summarizing

- In brief, we have looked at . . .
- So now I'd just like to summarize the main points.
- Today I've talked about . . .

Inviting Questions

Thank you for your attention. Does anyone have any questions?